No. PBM-03-26

Date: September 23, 2003

Expiration: September 23, 2004

SUBJECT: The Pentagon Library

The purpose of this building circular is to update military and civilian occupants of the Pentagon and other eligible Pentagon Library users to the changes in status of the Pentagon Library.

In April 2003, the Pentagon Library re-opened in the Butler building located at the South Parking end of A&E Drive. The Pentagon Library Reference Center remains open on the Concourse (next to the Hallmark card store). Each location offers different resources and services to library patrons. The reference center resources include audiotapes and cds, new books, newspapers, and current year issues of 100 of the most popular periodicals. Four computer stations for patron use with connections to the internet, stand-alone library catalogs, law cd-roms, a photocopy machine to copy library materials for official business, and two microform reader/printers are also available.

The Butler building houses the core library collection. Most of the books and periodicals are available and accessible here. Library resources and services, such as circulation (check in/out), reference, law, military documents, and the microforms along with reader/printers are located on the first floor. The general collection (75,000 volumes) is housed on the second floor and the collection of esoteric and military centered periodicals (400 periodicals), technical services personnel, and administrative personnel are on the third floor. Librarians and technicians are located on each floor to provide information and answer questions.

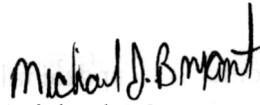

The Pentagon Library also provides a number of desktop services, allowing Pentagon personnel to access information from their own offices. The URL for desktop is www.hqda.army.mil/library.

Hours of operation for both physical locations are 0900-1600 Monday thru Friday, closed on federal holidays
